by Jason Thomas I have a love/hate relationship with Microsoft. Mostly it's hate. It's like a codependent relationship. Windows isn't actively aggressive anymore, it's just passive-aggressive. Instead of annoying with blue screens and spontaneous reboots like it did a few years ago, it annoys with clutter and an interface designed for the lowest common denominator. But I can't live without it. There are just too many applications which refuse to run well or at all on Linux. So I've developed ways of making Windows more livable. Minimalism is very important to me. I don't see the point of numerous bells and whistles, so much of what I do is about simplifying the visual experience to minimize distraction. Interface Clutter The first and most egregious thing about XP is how quickly the interface can get cluttered. XP likes to throw downloads, shortcuts, folders and whatever else onto the desktop. The mess is distracting, gets in the way and, I swear, makes it run more slowly. I've experimented with scripts to clear the desktop, but it's easier to just turn the icons off and be done with them. Icons and pin boards are so 1995. Right-click on the Desktop, choose Arrange Icons By and uncheck Show Desktop Icons. Trust me, it's just better that way. Half the time, the desktop is covered with hundreds of Explorer windows anyway. I also have a number of folders on the desktop for different file types that I work with regularly in Windows like HTML and Photoshop files. The reason I lay everything out off of the desktop is because I use the Desktop quick navigator toolbar. Right-click your taskbar, choose Toolbars, and make sure "Desktop" is checked. That will give you a little popup menu with which you can navigate anywhere on your system. I use these things heavily in Linux and got used to them there; if you have your desktop organized, this method can be a very quick way to get anywhere on your machine. Cygwin and File managers If you've worked with Windows for any length of time, you've realized that the Command Prompt is the worst part of the OS, hands down. It's terrible, inexcusable. It's inexplicable that a corporation as large as Microsoft should still be packaging something so unusable. So I use Cygwin instead. Cygwin is a compact UNIX core that runs within Windows. It's free and quite complete if you install everything. You can compile most UNIX programs from the Cygwin bash shell with the usual line `./configure && make && make install`. One thing I use Cygwin heavily for is file management. Windows Explorer is an example of Microsoft's lowest-common-denominator design, and I can't endure the pile of windows necessary to use it. I like two-pane file managers designed like Norton Commander or Midnight Commander, which comes with Cygwin and is accessible with the command `mc`. (Note: when running the Cygwin setup file, choose "mc: Midnight Commander Visual Shell" from the list of available packages.) I also use a graphical file manager called Worker which compiles and installs perfectly on Cygwin. Worker is very easy to use and very powerful. You can configure the button bar at the bottom to run commands and scripts of your own. There are a number of these file managers, but Worker is the one that I like best. I do also use one called Gento which is different from Worker but also good. See Worker in action below. (Click to enlarge.) Desktop Alternatives In Cygwin, I also often use the window manager WindowMaker. WindowMaker is the most faithful implementation of the NextStep GUI, which was so far ahead of its time in the late 1980s that it was matched only by OS/X. When you're at a Cygwin command line, start WindowMaker by typing `xwin -fullscreen && wmaker` which will start a fullscreen X session with WindowMaker as the window manager. You could also connect to a Mac or a UNIX server somewhere else with `ssh -l Y` and spawn a window manager directly from that machine. If you have a Mac at home and want to use your home interface from work, this can be a great way to do it. You can do the same thing with Cygwin as well. Either way, you'll need to configure your SSH daemon and your firewall to allow connections from the outside. (Note: make sure "WindowMaker" is selected during Cygwin setup to run it.) See Worker in action below. (Click to enlarge.) I imagine Cygwin could be a little bit daunting to a UNIX newbie, but once you get used to it you won't be able to live without it. It's the first step toward breaking the chains that Bill Gates has saddled us with. Enjoy! Jason Thomas is a writer and computer professional living in the Twin Cities. The concept of searching for the perfect wallpaper is as old as Windows itself. Why settle for standard, static wallpapers when you can easily get an animated one instead? There are hundreds of wallpapers for Windows, but it can be hard to find the perfect one. We have curated a list of the best animated wallpapers for Windows 10 to give you the best options to customize your desktop. If you want to see videos of some of the live wallpapers mentioned in this article, make sure to check out our YouTube channel where we posted a short video with clips. How to Set Animated Wallpapers There are a variety of programs that allow you to set live or animated wallpapers on Windows 10, and you may need one or more of these programs to use some of the entries on this list. You will also need a registered version of Windows 10; you can't get away with the free version because it locks down the personalization option. Download Rainmeter, Desktop Live Wallpapers, or another tool and follow the setup instructions. These tools will let you set animated or live wallpapers on your machine. Where to Find Animated Wallpapers One of the best places to find animated wallpapers is through the Wallpaper Engine on Steam. This application is $4 and has hundreds of user-created, high-quality backgrounds. Desktop Live Wallpapers is another app available for download for free through the Microsoft Store. It is used to install numerous wallpapers, both free and paid. PUSH Video Wallpaper is another paid solution that includes a variety of animated backgrounds, but it gives you the ability to use feature-length movies as your wallpaper. Ever dreamed of having the entirety of Shrek as your background? Now you can. The Best Animated Wallpapers for Windows 10 Here is a collection of some of the best and most popular animated wallpapers we've found on Windows 10. Doggie Corji (Wallpaper Engine) This wallpaper depicts a calming scene at a hot spring where three canine friends lounge and play in the water. Not only is it adorable, but it includes a musical key that plays whenever the desktop is visible. When you open another application in fullscreen mode, the music stops. Mt. Fuji in the Autumn Sunrise (Wallpaper Engine) If you prefer a more natural scene, this relaxing scene shows Mt. Fuji in the distance, framed by falling leaves and the soft ripples of a lake. There is no music and the background itself is much smaller in size, which means the animation uses far less RAM. The Weekend-Blinding Lights-Cat Cover (Wallpaper Engine) This wallpaper is the best choice for hilarity. It's hard to describe it, and far better if you check it out. The music will fade when you open a full-screen application and resume the moment you minimize it. Timelapse-Clouds 01 by Jama Jamon (Vidvivo) This wallpaper is actually a small video file downloaded and used in Desktop Live Wallpapers. It shows a wide-open field with clouds moving across the sky. Record Player Playing a Record (Vidvivo) This is another movie file. It can be applied to your wallpaper through a variety of tools. It's simple and shows a record playing spinning on a turntable-perfect for music fans. Red Car Driving Through Iceland (Vidvivo) This wallpaper shows the serene landscape of Iceland stretched out along a winding road with a single vehicle navigating the countryside. For those who love travel, it's perfect. City Night Lights (Pixabay) There's just something about a city at night. If you find the idea of staring out a window at traffic and watching the lights blink off in distant apartment buildings appealing, check out this background. Cafe Coffee Drink (Pixabay) Coffee is a part of almost everyone's life. For many people, it's essential for getting up in the morning. This wallpaper shows a calm morning scene where someone off-screen pours a cup of coffee into an adorable bear mug. Fire Burn Flame (Pixabay) Fire is motivating, but also relaxing. Think about the feeling spent staring into the fire at a campsite or at your home. This wallpaper is simple and shows an active flame burning against a dark background. X-Wing (Windows Customization) If you are a Star Wars fan-and who isn't?-then having X-Wings crossing your wallpaper is the height of fandom. This wallpaper is simple and shows the ships crossing the screen in a pixelated style, which makes it a great choice for lower-end machines. New York City Evening (Windows Customization) New York City has one of the most recognizable skylines on the planet, and it's a popular spot to visit for people traveling. If you've always dreamed of visiting the Big Apple, set it as your wallpaper and enjoy the beauty of the city at sunset. The Nebula (Windows Customization) One of the most well-known screensavers in Windows history is of the computer flying through space. While you might not be able to experience that as a wallpaper, you can get high-definition images of space instead. Synthwave Sunset Grid Live Wallpaper (MyLiveWallpapers) The cyber-grid pattern and orange/purple sunset colors of this animated wallpaper for Windows 10 are reminiscent of Outrun. If you're a fan of the series or just the popular synthwave theme, check this wallpaper out. Urban Sports Car Live Wallpaper (MyLiveWallpapers) Cars are a popular choice for wallpapers. Everyone dreams of driving a powerful machine that hugs the road and reaches completely-not-legal speeds. This depiction of a sports car in front of a distant urban environment is the fulfillment of that fantasy. The Matrix Animated Wallpaper (MyLiveWallpapers) The Matrix was one of the most influential movies of its time. If you're a programmer or just have a passing interest in coding, this wallpaper is perfect for you. It shows the iconic green text scrolling down the screen. You can pretend you're hacking into the Matrix.
